threpared by the National Generalities society, Washington, D. () Till passage of ten years as newly independent nation was celebrated by Poland on Armis tice day, November 11. Poland had a long history of independence before modern times, but the country's identity was snuffed out by Russia. Germany, and Austria more than a century igo, when those three powers dicided Polish territory among thenselves. The armistice brought back together the fragments of the old kingdom, and it has since functioned as a republic. tin the tenth anniversary of the new birth of Poland one might con sider the statistics of this new/old nation-statistics which would show the mighty strides that have been taken to make up for the years of didslon. But let us take this for granted, and gala instead a few glimpses of the picturesque places and people of l'oland's interior. The nation offers no speciacle more colorful than the Sunday procession in Lowiez. In rude farm wagons and on foot, the pensants come from humble villages in the widespread plain

Take the Egyptian Pharaoli Rameses III, who reigned about 3,000 years ago Ills fortune lins been estimated at 400,000 talents, about $500,000,000 in netual money today, but in the days of Rameses you could buy an ox for St. a bushel of wheat for 12 cents at 1 bricklayers received an average of 15cents a day; therefore, money in those days had 20 times the value it has today, so that old flameses was netually worth $10,000,000,000.

The ancient Egyptian kings used to plate their furniture with gold and encrust the frying pan, conce pot and other kitchen utcusils with preclous geins. And as for labor, Rameses is gald to have lifted 100,000 men for 20 years to build one pyramid; Jos Egspt is but one-third as large as Massachusetts with a population that never exceeded 7,000,000. For this reason, these tales of Egyptian riches were always considered products of the oriental imagination until Tal Anth-Amen's toinh was discovered with all its golden splendor, and from that thee historians have begun to give credence to their authenticity.

And you have heard of Croesus, the Lidian king. He longed to lick the Persians and sent the Delphian practe 117 bricks of gold, each weighing 400 pounds apiece, surmounted over all with a golden tion weighing 800 pounds. In addition, there was gold, allver, precious neckinces and money, the total value of the gift being $10. mound in the currency of that day. but multiply again by 20 and you'll notice that Crossus gave the oracle s little pourboire of $200,000,000 to lick the Persians-and they licked blm.

And don't forget that Solomon had an income equivalent to $20,000,000 inday. And then it has been duly recorsed and verified by historians that Pythlan gave Serves a little token of esteem amounting to $24,000,000, which multiplied by the inevitable 20, makes almost $500,000,000,-- Amertenn Mutual Magazine.

What Use Are Clocks That Strike at Night?

To all those who are victims of insompla, the distress caused by the striking and chiming of clocks (and especially those which occur every quarter of an hour) is well-nigh unbearable and is calculated to postpone indefinitely the chance of recovery, a writer in the Kansas City Star asserts. The vicar of a large church known to me, which has a loud chiming clock, the chimes occurring every quarter of an hour, has been recently obliged, in deference to the strongly expressed wishes of those having the misfortune to live in the vicinity, to have the chimes entirely taken of during the night hours. What is the use, or the supposed use, of a striking clock at night? I fail to see one single use for it. It ought to be as obsolete as the old watchman of bygone days, whose duty it was to call out each hour and the state of the weather. Those clocks having mechanism controlling the striking movements which is not capable of being switched off for the night hours should have their striking mechanism "scrapped."

tained itself by the benting of these wings like a dragon fly or a helicopter. The Aquitania's flying fish seems to bave answered the question. The deck was 40 feet above the water line, and no rush out of the water, whatever the force of the lenp, could, it is argued, lift a flying fish so high as that if it Itself higher,

Those who have believed that the wings do move, though their movement is so rapid as to be very hard to percelve, are now justified, and this flying fish, which was the learns of its kind (the first flyer of its race), should enjoy a sort of immortality for its effort. The ordinary flying fish seldom moves more than a few feet above the water and is generally found only in warm seas, and the Aquitania's dying fish was no ordinary adventurer.

OLD FASHIONED IDEAS WILL NOT STAND THE GAPP OF MODERN BUSINESS

Before he could dream of discovery Columbus and to cleanse his mind of superstition and projudice. Only the man willing to free himself from the shackles of "what used to be" is ready to entertain the new ideas which lead to progress. In every branch of science, of business, of art, and even of sport, this Companity progress is not less in the hands of the discoverers. The great advances have been made by men who explored new fields, unfettered by prejudice or tradition, for a prejudice blinds a man to the truth and, too, to a prejudiced man no argument appears reasonable.

The advice of scientific business is to investigate yourself, your business and your town.

New business, new towns, are fortunate in not being fettered with old traditions and ideas, fortunate that they have no barnacles on their ships; but many towns date back a long way and too often refuse to accept new ideas and new ways of doing things. For that reason they fail to grow, fall to advance and keep apace with modern times. Existing in a modern day with thoughts, Ideas and ways of doing things of the past, modern opportunities

Old-fashloned ideas will not stand the gail of modern business. If you ere going to grow and do business with modern people you have to be madern, for new-fahioned buyers avoid old-fashioned sellers. The old-fashioned people and old-fashioned business will soon be gone and then "What is, will cease to be," for the town that has not kept up to and ahead of date.

Old-fashfoned does not necessarily mean older people. It does mean those people who, because their grandfather before them did a certain thing in a certain way, think that that is the only way it can be done; the follow who says his way and his dea is always right and the other fellow wrong; the fellow that because he cannot do it or see how it is done, says it can't he done. In other words it means the fellow who condemns everything which is beyond his range.

The only old-fashloned people who can be considered assets in the world of today are those that retain the boy minds that is, those who are still entable of wonder, enthusiasm and experiment. When these three elements ty four possible of Burma paradio is fail, the man who is out of his grave is out of place as far as progress is concerned, for a man can appresiate only that which he knows.

Things are changing these days, and changing fast. Good roads, nutomobiles, trucks, busses and peroplanes are responsible for much of it. Raula and telephone are rushing us along to a new day, and the town that doesn't start DOING will some day be a village of the past.

Thinking people recognize that there is a new order of things, but the recognition is more evident in business than, in the development and conduct of civic affairs. Business withco has changed man from a fighting. hunting, furtive hiped, traveling on fuel or paddling a cause along winding rivers, painfully and slowly through the solitude of the great spaces to a ruler of the earth, flying through the air, sailing under the sea, sending messages around the world without in swingers or wires. You KNOW this,

This same science will bring forth even greater strides of development and change in the ways of doing things when applied to cities, towns and comminities. It WILL be applied. IS BEING applied. Because you have not SEEN it you may not KNOW it, and not knowing it, fail to appreciate

Every town should recognize the advantages of this new order of things and start NOW to DO that which is necessary to capitalize on the opportunity; but to do it, old superstitions and prejudices, if you have any, must be wiped out and a realization of a new order of things kept uppermost in

in Worship of Trees

Today among some of the tribes of Africa there is to be found a form of tree worship where certain members of the tribe are said to acquire a very intlimate communion with certain trees in the forest and to receive messages through them from another world. Nearly all nations have had at some time a sacred shrub, plant or tree, and appear to have been guilty of a species of idolatry in worshiping it. It is even conjectured that the adoration of idols sprang from this practice, the idol being made from the wood of the sacred

The prevailing color impression of Pompell is the lava gray which old Vesurius painted there at the time of its destruction. This is the color which shades walls and streets from the moment you enter the Marino gate, as you wander past the temples of Apollo and Jove or even enter the house of the Vetilt. It is fittingly so, for whitever our expectations may have been, the tragedy of that awful day needs a gray draping more than the artistic glory of brighter bucs.

ĬŢ HIS OWN WORST ENEMY

A good many people were not a litthe surprised when Count failed of election to sentor society. The choica of membership in usually made from the men who have hern most netlyo in undergraduate affairs. Scholarslilp is not the most important factor in pictormining election, though it is often inken into consideration. But Conant would have qualified in every way. He had maintained a very high scho-Jastic average throughout his entire course. He had been identified with one of the most highly rated extracorricular activities since his freshman year and had shown both energy and ability in the discharging of his dulles. I think he, himself, could not quite understand why he was not elected, and I am sure that his failure wounded his pride deeply.

It was not very difficult, however, to divine the reason. Conant was a confirmed pessimist. He was what the sellows called a "sone apple." It a statement were made, he was more than likely to take the opposite side and to do so rather sharply and surcostically. He had a sort of sucer on Tols face the most of the time; he sintulated indifference, a lack of sympathy, and a lack of faith in the integrily of anyone, and so he came to have

He was his own worst enemy, and this because he constantly put his worst side to the front. In truth, as I came to know, he was most kind-Diearted and sympathetic, He had high ideals, but these he concent d by bis cynicism. What he most longed for was friends, and yet by his manner he drove away from himself those who would have been only too glad to have taken him to their hearts.

We blame failure of mediocrity often upon circumstances, upon enelronment, upon the fact that we have got a bad break from something or some one and not infrequently there is reason for thinking as we do, but just as frequently we should find, if we anntrzed the altuation intelligently, that the fault is our own. We have been our own worst enouges 181. 1914, Western Gemapaper Union.)

THE POOR THING

(by D. J. Walah.)

THE Bartlett sisters, Emily and Pauline, were having a pleasant time making out a list of women whom they wished to invite to an afternoon tea, which they had been planning for a long time. On a snowy afternoon in a cozy room, no more delightful occupation could be conceived of than this, of making arrangements for a party, Emily was listing names at the old-fushioned spinet desk while Pauline at the window glanced up and down the street trying to decide on the next?

"There's Mrs. Wilson," she said. "We musn't forget her."

"Tye got her down," Emlly albhied her pencil thoughtfully. She was the younger of the two sisters, a slender, graceful woman past middle age. Pauline closely resembled her. Added to their good looks they had the refinement and dignity that comes from quiet ways, plenty of means and a taste for culture.

"And Maud Kelly?" suggested Paul-

There was silence while they both thought and thought in a mutual anxlety to leave no one of their neighbors out. Suddenly Emily gave a little

"Oh! There's Mrs. Spickle!" she exclaimed.

"Mrs. Spickle!" Pauline looked slightly alarmed, "Oh! Yes!- | sup pose we musn't leave her out?" "It wouldn't be kind," Emily suld. "She might feel hurt." And we are quite safe to ask her, dear. She never goes out anywhere." "I know she doesn't, poor thing." Pauline sighed. "Well, we will ask her then. Has she a telephone?" "I'll see," Emlly rummaged in the directory. "No. She hasn't a tele phone. We'll have to send her a note, Will you write it? You have a gift for notes."

Pauline wrote the note on her dala tlest stationery and committed it in the postnun. Of course she could have run down the street, to the bidcous green and sellow house where Mrs. Spickle resided, but it was easier to send a note. Besides, the sight of that house showing against the fresh snow gave her an absurdly billous sensation.

to all that neighborhood Mrs. Spickle was the one odd member. She was n woman of iniddle age, childless, with a husband who humored her foolishly, Old Mrs. Grant said Joe Spickle couldn't have existed a moment if he bada't humored Eunice. Still, nobody was sorry for blue. He was the kind of man made to be hossed by a woman. Just lately he had received a great sum of money through the death of a relative, and everybody was wondering what good this new fortune do them. Certainly Euplee would never spend any of it, either upon herself or other people. She was a woman of parrow and selfish habit of life whom most people avoided. But she was a neighbor, in the eyes of the Bartletts, and as such must not be overlooked. llaving done their duty by Mrs. Spickle the sisters went on with the preparations for their party which was to take place the next afternoon. Their pretty, old-fashioned cottage had a most gracious air of hospitality at any time, and with a few flowers used decoratively it expressed a charming feativity. Cakes were baked, ice cream ordered, and the best china, linen and sliver brought forth. By the following afternoon the sixters had received acceptance in all their invitations save one, Mrs. Solekie had as yet made no sign.

"The poor thing inted to say she couldn't come, may be." l'auline said. "It doesn't matter. We didn't realig expect ber"

Emily, with perfect grace, ushered her into the parlor. Her entrance produced on unmistakuble sensation. Even Pauline showed an instant's lack of self-possession, but she rallied bentetifully. The other women followe] Pauline's lead and greeted Mrs. Spickle sociably.

Mrs. Spickle, however, seemed to be intent on but one thing-to get to the register as quickly as possible. And when she arrived there she hitched her chair as close as she could and planted her feet upon the grate. Thereafter nothing, nothing could move her. She cared nothing for the games played and her only contribution to the conversation was concerning the price of coal, the cold weather, and her fear of getting a chill.

The sisters had arranged a buffetfunch in the dining room, and when the signal was given to the guests to repair thither Mrs. Spickle bolted, actually bolted, in order to be the first on the snot.

"Ten?" she inquired. "On i-what kind of ten? Oh! Well, I don't mind drinking it if it is made weak-very her old place on the register. "I thought I'd stay a spell longer," she remarked. "I want to look at your curtains. Did you make 'em yourself? And what did you have that black streak on the bottom for?"

"It came that way," l'auline explained faintly. Mrs. Spickie stayed a half-hour and then departed reluctuatly.

"I've had a spleudid time," she said. "I don't get out often, but now that we've got all Aunt Jemima's money, I've a notion to see what society is like." To the last the sisters maintained their courteous air. But once alone gazed and gazed at each other. They did not laugh, they did not rage; their hearts were too gentle.

"The poor thing," was all they said

THREE and one-half billion dollars is a lot of money. The annual income of the federal government, however, is approximately this amount. To be able to plan upon this amount year ofter year, its source must be one upon which a great deal of reliance esn be placed.

Money

One of the first acts of the first congress in 1789 was to pass a tark bill, because the need for ruising revenue was extremely pressing. Since this early beginning, there has never been a time when reliance has not heen placed upon the tariff for some revenue. During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1927, the total receipts from this source were something more than $605,000,000.

The early receipts from the tariff proved insufficient and were soon supplemented by a tax upon carriages, whisky and a few other commodities. These were unpopular, the one on whisky so much so that the whisky rebellion was the result. These taxes on commodifies were given up early in the Nineteenth century, but were called into use again to help finance the War of 1812, only to be discarded in 1817 to be used no more until the Civil war. Since the Civil war taxes npon commodities have been continnously used, the list being grently extended in time of emergency. At present the principal levies are upon tubacco, playing cards, automobiles and accessories. The total receipts in 1927 were about $800,000,000.

During the Civil war the federal government levied a tax on personal incomes. This was given up in 1872 and no revenue was again received from this source until 1913. In 1999 an excise tax was first levied upon corporations measured by a tax on the net income. Both taxes continue in the present revenue system and were responsible in 1027 for receipts totaling more than $1,982,000,000.

At different emergencies the federal government has taxed inheritances or estates. An estate tax was introduced during the World war which has been continued in modified form. The recelpts from this source in 1927 were but a few million dollars.

The federal government is the owner of a number of securities which are productive of revenue. The foreign obligations brought in 1927, through payment of principal and interest, about $200,000,000. The receipts from railrond securities were about $00,-000,000, those from the sale of surplus property about $18,000,000, while the Panama canal tolls were about $25
